Alta tensione Nato-Russia, 'più aggressivi verso Mosca'. Putin, 'prepararsi per continuare a combattere' - Notizie - Ansa.it

Agenzia ANSA; Redazione ANSA • 2025-12-01

https://www.ansa.it/sito/notizie/mondo/2025/12/01/alta-tensione-nato-russia-piu-aggressivi-verso-mosca\_79fe36be-4ff0-42e8-84aa-60d6ff1fe491.html

Davanti alla guerra ibrida di Mosca la Nato sta valutando una postura più 'aggressiva' alla luce degli attacchi informatici, dei sabotaggi e delle violazioni dello spazio aereo alleato, attribuiti spesso alla Russia. Lo ha affermato l'ammiraglio Giuseppe Cavo Dragone, presidente del comitato militare della Nato, in un'intervista al

Financial Times. 'Stiamo studiando tutto', ha assicurato. 'Sul fronte informatico, siamo in un certo senso reattivi: essere più aggressivi o proattivi, invece che reattivi, è qualcosa a cui stiamo pensando'. Le parole di Cavo Dragone arrivano dopo mesi di dibattiti intensi all'interno dell'Alleanza, con i falchi - soprattutto sul fianco orientale - che chiedono azioni più decise davanti ai continui test della Russia - l'ultimo episodio sospetto risale alla notte scorsa, quando l'avvistamento di 57 palloni aerostatici nello spazio aereo lituano ha imposto la chiusura per undici ore dell'aeroporto di Vilnius -, mentre gli alleati occidentali sono più restii ad attraversare il Rubicone. Il comandante supremo, il generale Usa Alexus Grynkevich, ha ad esempio proposto al Consiglio Atlantico una sorta di armonizzazione delle regole d'ingaggio nel quadro della nuova missione Sentinella dell'Est, così da non dover chiedere lumi ogni volta alle capitali sul tipo di risposta da mettere in campo con gli effettivi che ha a disposizione. Fermo restando che, in caso di rischio grave e immediato, ha sempre l'autorità per intervenire, come ha fatto abbattendo i droni russi in Polonia. Un conto però sono i missili, un altro il cyber. Qui potrebbero aprirsi degli spazi sinora inesplorati. 'Essere più aggressivi rispetto alla nostra controparte - ha precisato Cavo Dragone - potrebbe essere un'opzione. Le questioni sono il quadro giuridico, il quadro giurisdizionale, chi lo farà?'. Cavo Dragone ha ammesso che la Nato e i suoi membri hanno 'molti più limiti della nostra controparte per motivi etici, legali, giurisdizionali. È un problema. Non voglio dire che sia una posizione perdente, ma è una posizione più difficile di quella della nostra controparte'. Mosca, insomma, ha molti meno scrupoli della Nato, che è pur sempre un'alleanza difensiva. Visitando un centro di comando delle truppe impegnate nel conflitto in Ucraina, il presidente russo Vladimir Putin ha affermato che le forze di Mosca devono prepararsi a continuare a combattere anche durante l'inverno. "Putin - scrive il Cremlino sul suo canale Telegram - ha ringraziato i comandanti e il personale delle formazioni per le azioni riuscite, e ha posto l'obiettivo di garantire alle forze russe tutto ciò di cui hanno bisogno per condurre azioni militari nel periodo invernale prossimo". Le forze di Mosca hanno conquistato le città di Pokrovsk, nella regione ucraina di

Donetsk, e di Volchansk, nel Kharkiv, secondo quanto riferito dal portavoce del Cremlino, Dmitry Peskov. Lo scrive l'agenzia Ria Novosti. Peskov ha detto che Putin ha visitato uno dei posti di comando delle forze impegnate nel conflitto in Ucraina, dove ha ricevuto i rapporti del capo di Stato maggiore Valery Gerasimov e altri alti ufficiali. "Il generale Gerasimov ha riferito al comandante in capo (Putin) della liberazione delle città di Krasnoarmeysk (il nome russo di Pokrovsk, ndr) e di Volchansk, così come dei risultati delle operazioni offensive delle truppe in altre aree", ha detto il portavoce del presidente. Il Cremlino ha aggiunto che il comandante delle forze del Gruppo Est, Andrei Ivanayev, ha riferito a Putin dell'"inizio dell'operazione per la liberazione della città di Hulyaypole, nella regione di Zaporizzhia, da parte delle unità della 5/a Armata". "Al momento - ha detto ancora il Cremlino - le unità della 5/a Armata stanno conducendo combattimenti urbani nella parte nord-est della città". Ecco perché non è facile accomodare la linea degli alleati più esposti alle azioni russe. Cavo Dragone ha affermato, infatti, che 'un attacco preventivo' potrebbe essere considerato 'un'azione difensiva', ma poi ha aggiunto: 'È più lontano dal nostro modo normale di pensare e di comportarci'. Il passaggio ha suscitato l'attenzione dei media russi. 'Riteniamo che la dichiarazione di Cavo Dragone sui potenziali attacchi preventivi contro la Russia sia un passo estremamente irresponsabile, che dimostra la volontà dell'alleanza di continuare a muoversi verso un'escalation', ha attaccato la portavoce del ministero degli Esteri russo, Maria Zakharova. Una posizione condivisa dalla Lega: 'Mentre Usa, Ucraina e Russia cercano una mediazione, gettare benzina sul fuoco con toni bellici o evocando attacchi preventivi significa alimentare l'escalation. Non avvicina la fine del conflitto: la allontana. Serve responsabilità, non provocazioni', ha dichiarato il Carroccio sui social. 'Non mi pare che si debba fare un dibattito' sull'intervista dell'ammiraglio, 'credo che noi dobbiamo tutelare i nostri interessi, proteggere la nostra sicurezza e prepararci anche a difenderci da una guerra ibrida', ha replicato il ministro degli Esteri e vicepremier, Antonio Tajani, invitando a 'non fare una polemica'. Il presidente Sergio Mattarella ha invece lanciato un monito sulle 'drammatiche conseguenze' della mancata 'realizzazione di una difesa comune europea'. Le hotline delle cancellerie in questi giorni sono appunto caldissime, con l'alto rappresentante Ue Kaja Kallas che, in apertura di giornata, ha definito la settimane come 'forse cruciale per la diplomazia'. E si è detta preoccupata. 'Vedo molta pressione sulla vittima, l'Ucraina, ma allo stesso tempo non vengono richiesti sacrifici alla Russia, che noi sappiamo'. Mercoledì a Bruxelles si riuniranno i ministri degli Esteri della Nato, ma il segretario di Stato Usa Marco Rubio non sarà presente, perché impegnato appunto nei negoziati. 'Tutti i lavori sono stati risucchiati dalle trattative', confida un diplomatico alleato. Riproduzione riservata © Copyright ANSA

Zelensky da Macron: "La pace deve diventare duratura". Poi sentono gli altri leader Ue

Francesco Russo • 2025-12-01

<https://www.agi.it/estero/news/2025-12-01/ucraina-zelensky-con-macron-pace-diventare-duratura-34436259/>

AGI - Nessun piano di pace in Ucraina può essere chiuso senza il coinvolgimento di Kiev e dell'Europa. Questo il monito lanciato dal presidente francese, Emmanuel Macron, il giorno prima del viaggio a Mosca dell'inviatore della Casa Bianca, Steve Witkoff, che incontrerà il presidente russo Vladimir Putin per discutere una bozza di accordo apparsa, almeno nella sua prima versione, troppo schiacciata sui desiderata di Mosca. Quella che era iniziata come una partita a due tra Stati Uniti e Russia ha visto nelle fasi più recenti un maggiore coinvolgimento di Kiev. Il segretario del Consiglio per la Sicurezza Nazionale e capo delegazione ucraino, Rustem Umerov, è ancora in Florida, dove oggi ha incontrato di nuovo Witkoff, presente ieri ai colloqui insieme al segretario di Stato, Marco Rubio, e al genero del presidente Donald Trump, Jared Kushner. Umerov e Witkoff si sono collegati in teleconferenza con l'Eliseo, dove Macron stava accogliendo l'omologo ucraino, Volodymyr Zelensky, per fare il punto sulla trattativa. I contatti hanno coinvolto inoltre un gran numero di leader europei, tra cui il presidente del Consiglio italiano Giorgia Meloni; il cancelliere tedesco Friedrich Merz; il premier britannico Keir Starmer; i vertici di Commissione e Consiglio europei, Ursula von der Leyen e Antonio Costa; il segretario generale della Nato, Mark Rutte, e i capi di governo di Polonia, Norvegia, Danimarca, Finlandia e Paesi Bassi. "Abbiamo discusso a fondo le principali priorita' attuali con i nostri amici europei", ha spiegato su Telegram il presidente ucraino, "abbiamo discusso il contenuto dei colloqui della delegazione ucraina con la controparte americana in Florida. Siamo tutti d'accordo che la guerra debba finire dignitosamente". Mosca, quindi, "non deve essere ricompensata per la sua guerra all'Ucraina", ha sottolineato Zelensky, che ha glissato sulla questione dei territori che potrebbero essere ceduti, definita "il tema piu' difficile" ma non prioritario rispetto alla necessita' di evitare altri spargimenti di sangue. Anche per il leader di Kiev, a ogni modo, la trattativa "non potra' fare molta strada senza coinvolgere gli europei", che dovranno essere corresponsabili delle garanzie di sicurezza, si faranno carico del grosso della ricostruzione e hanno in mano i dossier delle sanzioni Ue e dei beni congelati. Le garanzie di sicurezza per l'Ucraina devono essere "discusse con l'Europa e con tutti i membri della coalizione dei volenterosi" in quanto si tratta di una "questione di sicurezza europea", ha avvertito da parte sua Macron, per il quale "non esiste un piano definitivo a oggi", anzi, addirittura "siamo ancora in una fase preliminare". Sulle cessioni territoriali, ha insistito il presidente francese, può decidere solo l'Ucraina. E "sulle questioni dei beni congelati, delle garanzie di sicurezza, dell'adesione all'Unione Europea e delle sanzioni europee", ha aggiunto Macron, il piano "può essere finalizzato solo con gli europei intorno al tavolo". Tutti elementi-chiave che Zelensky si è augurato di poter discutere presto con Trump, ringraziato da entrambi i leader per la sua opera di mediazione. Duri esercizi di equilibrio verbale di fronte a un'amministrazione che, in questa trattativa, sembra vedere l'Europa più come ingombro che come possibile sponda. Eloquente il commento sardonico del premier polacco Donald Tusk che, ospite di Merz a Berlino, ha osservato che "non tutti a Washington" vogliono coinvolta nel processo di pace Varsavia, cui il cambio della guardia alla Casa Bianca ha strappato il ruolo di nuovo miglior alleato degli americani nel vecchio continente. L'importanza della "convergenza di vedute tra partner europei e Stati Uniti quale fondamento per il raggiungimento di una pace giusta e duratura" è stata rimarcata da Meloni, che auspicato da Mosca "un fattivo contributo al processo negoziale". Per Merz, "la linea è chiara: nessuna decisione riguardante l'Ucraina e l'Europa senza gli ucraini e senza gli europei, nessuna pace imposta alle spalle dell'Ucraina, nessun indebolimento o divisione dell'Unione Europea e della Nato". Che "a un certo punto bisognerà coinvolgere anche gli europei" lo ha ammesso di recente anche il portavoce del Cremlino, Dmitry Peskov. Quanto possa essere vicino questo momento lo scopriremo domani.

Almeno 12 persone sono morte e altre decine sono disperse per una frana che ha travolto due imbarcazioni sul fiume Ucayali, in Perù - Il Post

• 2025-12-01

<https://www.ilpost.it/2025/12/01/peru-fiume-ucayali-imbarcazioni-affondate-frana-morti-dispersi/>

Almeno 12 persone sono morte e altre decine sono disperse per una frana che ha travolto due imbarcazioni sul fiume Ucayali, in Perù Almeno 12 persone sono morte e altre decine sono disperse nella parte centrale del Perù a causa di una frana che ha travolto e fatto affondare due imbarcazioni per il trasporto di passeggeri sul fiume Ucayali, il principale corso d'acqua che forma il Rio delle Amazzoni. Al momento non è chiaro quante siano le persone disperse: circa venti sono state soccorse. L'incidente è avvenuto attorno alle 5 del mattino (le 11 italiane) all'altezza del porto di Iparía, e ha coinvolto perlopiù abitanti delle comunità indigene della zona, dove spesso i fiumi sono la principale via di trasporto. Il Centro nazionale che si occupa delle emergenze (COEN) ha detto che sul posto stanno intervenendo la polizia e una squadra della marina militare, oltre al personale medico. Le ricerche delle persone disperse sono complicate dalla corrente del fiume e dai detriti che trasporta.

The 171 Very Best Cyber Monday Deals on Gear We Loved Testing

Louryn Strampe; Molly Higgins • 2025-12-02

<https://www.wired.com/story/cyber-monday-deals-2025/>

Cyber Monday deals are still live for a few more hours, and while many of these bargains have been around since Black Friday, today brought a fresh batch of price drops that are worth catching before they're gone. The WIRED Reviews team has hundreds of years of collective experience tracking actual deals—not just inflated markdowns—on products we've hand-tested. Below, you'll find everything that made the cut: True discounts on the gear and gadgets we'd recommend to our friends and family. Updated December 1, 2025: We've added more deals, including great discounts on the best earbuds for Android, some Bose headphones, a new deal on the best office chair we've tested, our favorite green powders, and more. - The best Android: Google Pixel 10 for $599 ($200 off) - Big backup: Western Digital 5TB My Passport Ultra Drive for $125 ($30 off) - Tag, you're it: Meta Quest 3S with Gorilla Tag for $250 ($50 off) - Play Pac-Man: Lego Pac-Man Arcade Building Set for $189 ($80 off) - An essential iPad: iPad 11-inch for $274 ($75 off) - A MacBook alternative: Surface Laptop for $700 ($209 off) - Super cheap security: Blink Mini 2 for $18 ($22 off) - Our favorite office chair: Branch Ergonomic Chair Pro for $424 ($75 off) Jump to section: Computers, Mobile Devices & Charging, TV & Audio, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel Computers Dell had a killer $500 discount all weekend on the Core Ultra 5 version of its Dell 14 Plus. It was a high-end laptop being sold for downright budget-level prices. It's sold out now, unfortunately. But the current discount is still quite good. It's on a slightly more powerful configuration with the Core Ultra 7, as well as the same 2560 by 1600 resolution screen. This is a very strong display for a laptop at this price. While the Surface Laptop is better in many ways, the $650 Dell 14 Plus gets you a full terabyte of storage.—Luke Larsen The M4 MacBook Air has been the best laptop on the market since it was released in 2024. The price has slowly dropped, too. It's now down to $749, and when you compare this directly with the quality of similarly priced laptops, you'll see why it's still at the top of my list. The display quality and resolution is top-notch, while the performance and battery life remain best in class. If the rumors are true, we're still at least a few months out from the M5 MacBook Air, making this M4 still worthy of a purchase at this price. —Luke Larsen The $200 range used to get you a crappy, 1080p monitor with terrible colors. But thanks to this deal, it can afford you a beautiful 4K monitor with a 120-Hz refresh rate and a fully-adjustable stand. It's IPS, but it has decent color coverage and accuracy, with a max brightness of 355 nits. Just be aware: it doesn't have built-in USB ports and the stand doesn't have enough height adjustment to be used as a vertical monitor. But for run-of-the-mill, at-home use, you won't find another monitor with the complete package that the Dell 27 Plus 4K has. —Luke Larsen This is the Wi-Fi 7 router I recommend for most people in our best Wi-Fi routers guide because it's easy to set up and will cover homes and apartments up to around 2,000 square feet with fast, reliable connectivity. It's only dual-band, so you do miss out on the 6-GHz band, but you get all the other advantages of Wi-Fi 7. It also has a generous array of ports and comes with free security software and parental controls. Support for VPN service, separate IoT or guest networks, and Ai Mesh rounds out an excellent device. —Simon Hill When it comes to your home office, there's still nothing like a solid pair of desk speakers to amplify your work-from-home setup. These computer speakers from Audioengine rarely go on sale, so now's a great time to pick up a pair. They're our favorite computer speakers, with robust sound, and they won't take up much room on a desk.

Music is where these speakers shine, even without a dedicated subwoofer.—Luke Larsen This portable hard drive is our pick for the best portable backup because it's small (less than an inch thick) but sturdy and balances respectable performance with convenience in the form of a regular USB-C connection. This is the device we'd want to run daily backups in a hotel room while on location shooting photos or video. The current model of iPad (A16) has dropped below the $300 price we typically see on sales. This tablet functions as a second screen for everything from watching movies on a flight to checking the news in bed without your reading glasses. The last one I bought was promptly taken over by my daughter, who uses it to play Roblox. —Martin Cizmar Mobile Devices & Charging Google's shiny new Pixel 10 is one of the best Android phones on the market right now. It's rare to find a phone at this price, especially on sale, with a triple-camera system that includes a 5X optical zoom sensor so you won't have trouble capturing sharp photos of birds up in the tree, your kid earning their diploma, or your favorite artist onstage. Not to mention this is one of the first flagship Android phones with Qi2 magnets, meaning, similar to Apple's iPhones, you can magnetically attach the phone to wireless chargers and docks for speedy charging (and attach various fun magnetic accessories). Best of all is Google's smart software; Yes, there's a lot of generative AI creep that isn't super useful, but tools like Call Screen can filter out spam calls, and Now Playing automatically tells you what song is playing at the coffee shop without you having to lift a finger. Read our Best Pixel Phones guide for more details. —Julian Chokkattu The best wireless charger is usually pretty affordable, but at just over $10, it's a no-brainer for anyone in the market. You can choose from a pad or a stand option; Both have rubbery grips on the bottom to prevent slips and slides, and they'll charge your phone reliably at 10, 7.5, or 5 watts depending on your device. Note that you need to bring your own wall charger! (I like these from the same brand.) —Louryn Strampe The Anker 737 power bank is my go-to companion for ... well, basically all the time, but especially music festivals. (It's literally sitting next to me right now.) The beefy brick is surprisingly heavy, and it has a 24,000-mAh capacity with 140-watt fast-charging. It can top off your phone, your Nintendo Switch, or even your laptop. My favorite part is that the power bank itself recharges really quickly, in just about an hour. It also has a neat built-in display that offers helpful information like charging speeds and battery health. —Louryn Strampe This is the current generation of Echo Dot. This small device has powerful, robust sound and works a treat if you want Alexa access in a discreet space. I keep one in my hallway so I can ask quick questions as I move through the house, and one in my bedroom as an alarm clock. It packs some of the best sound you can get for this price, especially when it's on sale like it is for Cyber Monday. —Nena Farrell The reMarkable 2 is one of the best digital notebooks you can get. It's my favorite budget option, which might seem weird since it's not necessarily the cheapest (it's the same price as the Kindle Scribe). It's the best for the features and the available accessories like a keyboard folio at this price point, and it costs less than the rest of reMarkable's lineup or competitors like Supernote. You can get bundles (you'll need to choose both a marker and folio) of the reMarkable 2 for $70 right now, letting you add on your favorite folio or upgrade the marker without paying as much as you usually would. The digital notebooks from reMarkable are rarely on sale, so don't miss this one. —Nena Farrell Jump to section: Computers, Mobile Devices & Charging, TV & Audio, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel TV & Audio This is our favorite TV for most people, because it offers excellent color and great processing, and contains virtually every app you could want. Mini LED backlighting means that you'll have excellent contrast and plenty of performance in bright rooms, and TCL's anti-glare technology makes it nice even when sunlight hits it. Its price is the main appeal; you'll pay hundreds of dollars more for a TV that looks any better. —Parker Hall Reviewer Chris Haslam lavished praise on this Anker projector, which claims to be the world's first cinema-grade outdoor entertainment system. It's a 4K projector capable of creating a 200-inch image with 3,500 ANSI lumens of brightness, but requires very little setup. It will also work with microphones for karaoke or business presentations. The list price is very steep for a portable projector, but this Cyber Monday sale drops $800 off. —Martin Cizmar This streaming stick is what I'd recommend for anyone who just wants to enable an older TV to stream modern apps. It looks fine, but you may want to spring for a nicer stick if you have a newer TV. That said, you really cannot beat this $20 price. This is a gadget that can breathe new life into an older screen in your basement or garage, or which you can use to stream your shows in a hotel room without being too annoyed if you someday leave it behind. —Parker Hall Note: There are lots of great streaming service deals right now too, such as HBO Max's $3 per month offer, which locks you in for a whole year at that price. This is our favorite soundbar system for most people, thanks to its great wireless subwoofer, solid audio processing, and compact footprint below most screens. If you've been struggling to hear the voices on screen, or you just want for a more cinematic experience, I recommend the SR-C30A. —Parker Hall JBL's Bluetooth speakers are some of our favorites that money can buy, and the Flip 7 is no exception. We like how durable it is, as well as how loud the tube-shaped speaker can get when placed on a table or in a corner. —Parker Hall These are the best noise-canceling headphones from Sony, and among the best wireless headphones you can buy. They have insane processing power that can easily silence even the loudest sounds around you, and the included microphones are also awesome for Zoom calls. Sound quality is excellent, with custom-made drivers delivering Sony's sleek and flat sound. —Parker Hall These are our favorite wireless earbuds for most people. I actually just bought a pair last week after confirming with resident audiophile Parker Hall that I'd like them more than my stinky, annoying, horrible-touch-controls AirPods Gen 2. And I do! The Nothing Ear (a) have a super-cool translucent charging case, and they're comfortable. They also sound great out of the box, though you can tweak the EQ in the app. Tack on the 5-hour battery life and excellent touch controls, and I don't know why I ever waited so long to get a pair for myself. This deal matches the best we've ever tracked. —Louryn Strampe Jump to section: Computers, Mobile Devices & Charging, TV & Audio, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel Home & Kitchen TP-Link's Kasa line of mini smart plugs performs as well as larger plugs but in a smaller size that won't obstruct a second outlet. The app is simple to navigate and has scenes, timers, and schedules. For the extra cautious, there's even an away mode that turns the plugs on and off randomly during the time you choose to confuse anyone observing your routine. Smart plug sales are in short supply this Cyber Monday, but this is a few bucks cheaper than it was in recent weeks. —Martin Cizmar This is our top office chair recommendation for most people. Branch's Ergonomic Chair Pro offers oodles of adjustments, from seat pan to lumbar support, all while looking nice in your office. It's hard to find affordable, good office chairs, especially under $500, but Branch is one of the few companies delivering in this price bracket. We've rounded up more deals on Branch products here. —Julian Chokkattu Normally, I would expect to spend around $1000 for a new, well-functioning, dual-function vacuum-mop robot vacuum. But you can get an even bigger break on price if you look at past-season models. Yeedi is the affordable sub-brand of the higher-end Ecovacs. At 4- and 3.5-liter capacities, the clean/dirty water tanks are just ginormous and offer excellent value for the price. You won't have to switch them out too often. This model also has an extendable arm for cleaning hard-to-reach places and a decent 11,000 Pa of suction. —Adrienne So This is the very best price we've seen all year for this fantastic Dyson vacuum. It's our favorite vacuum cleaner for both wet and dry cleaning, since it takes the technology we love from the V15 and adds a wet mop head attachment. WIRED reviewer Adrienne So says this vacuum is one of the best things that has ever happened to her. —Nena Farrell The debut of Dyson's first tabletop-sized air purifier was just announced in September; it's finally here, and we've tried it. Its claim to fame is that it uses electrostatic filtration, which incorporates electrically charged plates to attract dust, pollen, dander, and other allergens. In our guide to the Best Air Purifiers, WIRED contributor Lisa Wood Shapiro notes this means the filter can last up to five years, as opposed to six to 12 months like a typical HEPA. She found it to be a little loud, measuring twice the advertised decibels on its highest setting, but it's otherwise a great option for smaller areas like bedrooms. —Kat Merck The Arlo Pro 5S tops our best outdoor security cameras guide by offering crisp 2K video, color night vision, a wide 160-degree field of view, and clear two-way audio. It also boasts reliable AI recognition for people and pets, a direct Wi-Fi connection, and a siren to scare intruders away. The Arlo app is fantastic, too. The catch is a pricey subscription (Arlo Secure costs $8 per month for one camera or $13 per month for unlimited cameras) that's required for subject recognition, smart alerts, and cloud storage. —Simon Hill Canopy is the best filtered shower wand I've tested, a tri-layer filter my tests showed to reduce the total chlorine levels in my water to undetectable levels out of the box, and maintain most of this effectiveness for a couple months before a refill. Filter replacement is easy, meaning you're likely to actually do it, and Canopy's filter replacements don't cost as much as some competitors. The upfront price is usually more of a barrier, but half off is a very good discount. —Matthew Korfhage This is the best price you'll get all year for our all-around favorite smart bird feeder. It may not be the fanciest model, but it's user-friendly and reliable. You can enjoy it without a subscription (though for the AI identification and image/video storage, you'll want to spring for the extra $5 a month), and the app makes it easy to save and share great captures of birds. Note that Birdfy only works with 2.4 GHz Wi-Fi, and the base model comes without a solar panel. I don't mind this, as Birdfy's panel has to be mounted separately, and it's hard to do this when the feeder is installed on a pole, which is what I recommend. —Kat Merck This is one of the priciest automatic litter boxes on the market right now. It has a built-in camera on a swivel arm and uses AI technology to monitor litter box usage. Together, the camera follows your cat when it senses motion and records inside the litter box, and the AI monitors which pet is using and if anything is amiss. The app logs and monitors usage, including the number of times used and the average duration. It also has auto-bagging and -sealing features, so you never have to deal with the stool. At $300 off, this is the best price we've tracked. —Molly Higgins I test indoor hydroponic garden systems all year round, and Gardyn has been my consistent favorite. I have two of them—the Home 4, with 30 plants, and the brand-new Studio 2, with 16 plants—and they both look like living works of art, overflowing with everything from peas and peppers to nasturtiums and even canna lilies. The systems do take a fair amount of maintenance, but as a busy, full-time working parent, it's nothing I haven't been able to handle. If you've been curious about these, all Gardyn systems are now 20 percent off for Cyber Monday, netting you $180 off a Home or $111 off a Studio. If you don't mind the older, original studio, that's on an even deeper discount for just $337. They also come with a free 30-day trial of Kelby, the AI growing assistant that plans your watering and maintenance schedules for you. —Kat Merck The Moccamaster KBGV drip coffee machine is a rare combination of qualities. It is an absolute tank, a forever resident of WIRED's highly selective buy-it-for-life list with a five-year warranty, replaceable parts, and lifetime repairability. But it is also a creature of remarkable precision, hand assembled in the Netherlands to produce some of the cleanest cups of drip coffee I've tasted. As someone in the coffee industry what's on their counter. There's a good chance they say Moccamaster. Just note that different colors have different discounts. —Matthew Korfhage The Ninja Luxe Cafe Pro is the upgrade version of Ninja's first-generation semi-automatic Luxe Cafe Premier espresso machine, which was one of the most popular espresso machines on the planet last year. The Pro is a genuine upgrade: a better tamper, a hot water spout, a great milk automatic steamer, and the best cold frother in the business. This is the lowest price I've seen it, and while supplies last you can also get a free travel mug, knock box, or pitcher. It's especially great for lovers of medium or dark roast beans. —Matthew Korfhage This is Breville's top-line piece of kitchen hardware, an air fryer and oven that has better precision than any other oven I've tested. It toasts evenly across the oven and can air fry chicken wings to admirable crispness, dehydrate fruit, and also roast a 14-pound turkey. The Breville Joule—the same oven, but with a handy autopilot feature—is on almost the same sale, and it's $400. Both are the cheapest they've been this year. But this $300 price, for an oven I know to serve well for years, is hard to pass up. —Matthew Korfhage Jump to section: Computers, Mobile Devices & Charging, TV & Audio, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel This LEGO set allows you to build a miniature 80s-style cabinet for what's arguably the most iconic arcade game of all time, released 45 years ago this year. It comes in 2,600 pieces and will stand 12 inches tall in the end. It's not playable, but there is a knob to twist which causes the characters to move in a simulated chase. —Martin Cizmar

Beauty & Wellness

If you already own an Apple Watch, I generally do not advocate upgrading to the latest model, given they're all pretty iterative. I do think that this year's Series 11 is worth getting because, for the first time ever, it really does have a full 24 hours of battery life. It's on sale for $369 right now. But last year's Series 10 (Apple's 10th anniversary watch) has the same S10 chip as the latest watches. It also has the same slim case, large screen, and is compatible with watchOS 26 (with an Apple Intelligence-enabled iPhone), so you can still enjoy the Liquid Glass design, Workout Buddy, and flick away Smart Stack with your wrist. —Adrienne So

There's no fitness tracker that truly competes with the Fitbit Charge 6. Despite being two years old, the Fitness Charge 6 remains the de facto option, with long battery life and a full suite of health metrics to obsess over, including really accurate heart rate tracking. It might not feel as premium as an Apple Watch, and it doesn't have fall detection, but for the price, the Fitness Charge 6 is as good as it gets.—Luke Larsen

The Hypervolt 2 is our top choice for a percussive massage gun. While the Theragun Pro Plus is a top-tier option for serious athletes—and on sale for $550 (originally $650)—the Hypervolt 2 offers a more affordable alternative. At just 1.8 pounds, it packs a powerful brushless 60-watt motor, three speed settings, and five different massage heads designed for most muscle groups. It can connect to the Hyperice app via Bluetooth for guided routines, provides up to three hours of battery life, and is TSA-approved for carry-on travel. —Boutayna Chokrane

Urevo's CyberPad for Home is our favorite walking pad. It can go up to a 14 percent incline, which is like walking up a steep hill. Our reviewer Kristin Canning was genuinely able to get a good sweat going while working, although the speed tops out at 4 mph. It's easy to set up right out of the box, and you can control it either via the Bluetooth remote or the app. If you use the app, it offers workouts with pretty scenery and will also log your workout data from the machine so you don't need a separate fitness tracker. It feels pretty stable underfoot and there are also fun extras, like little lights under the side rail so you can feel like walking is a party! —Adrienne So

Even on a bad day, this is the absolute best beard trimmer set you can get for south of $100—quiet, reliable, not subject to nicks or pulls. It's a contender for my favorite grooming set overall in part because of the ridiculously good performance on the foil shaver attachment (Philips kills it on foil shavers in general). The metal body offers admirable heft and durability, and the battery will run a ridiculous five hours without needing a charge—months' worth of shaves. —Matthew Korfhage

Best Beauty Deal: Dyson Airstrait for $399 ($151 Off)

Here it is; the one, the only, the legend—the original air styler that spawned a hundred imitators. I tested it for the first time this year for my guide to the Best Hair Straighteners. I had heard that it wasn't a one-stop shop for 3a curly hair and above, and as you can see from my picture above, it's not. I still needed to use a traditional flat iron afterward, especially on the top of my head. But the Dyson engineering and quality are evident in every small detail, from the Hyperdymium motor—same as in Dyson's vacuum cleaners—to the glass bead thermistors that regulate the tool's temperature. I can see how it would be life-changing for those with wavy or just generally easier-to-straighten hair. The Airstrait doesn't go on sale all that often, so if it was on your Christmas shopping list, now is the time. —Kat Merck

I've tried dozens of different greens powders, and Bloom remains my favorite. There are 10 flavors to choose from, and all of them are pleasant—and disguise the fact that you're drinking a blend of fruits, vegetables, and other ingredients. They're a little on the sweet side, but they did help noticeably with my digestion woes. If you've been looking for greens to help supplement a balanced diet, this brand is the one I'd recommend trying first. —Louryn Strampe

When it's time to stop doomscrolling and start falling asleep, it can be hard for your brain to switch gears. The Hatch Restore 3 is a sound machine that helps you establish both a nighttime and a morning routine, complete with a sunrise alarm clock feature to kickstart your day gently. You'll need a Hatch+ membership to access the vast library of sounds, podcasts, and stories, but with the Restore 3 at the lowest price we've seen this year, you can reallocate your funds toward it. And based on our testing, both are worth it. —Julia Forbes Our very favorite down comforter offers luxurious, classic, cozy warmth in a crinkly and slightly starched outer shell. It's fluffy and lofty, but doesn't feel too lightweight, and it keeps me toasty even on the coldest winter nights in northern Illinois. The baffle boxes help ensure that the down filling stays evenly distributed. —Louryn Strampe Jump to section: Computers, Mobile Devices & Charging, TV & Audio, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel Travel Deals For something both sleek and minimalist, there's nothing out there quite like the Away Softside Carry-On. WIRED editor Adrienne So, who has tested and reviewed tons of carry-on bags over the years, calls it the "fuss-free option" that she'll always pick, given the choice. And if you're worried about it holding up in rain because it's soft, don't worry. She says the rain-resistant materials held up just fine on particularly rainy day in the Philippines while waiting for a ferry. —Luke Larsen This is my favorite camera bag. The Prvke is now in its fourth generation, and Wandrd keeps perfecting it. I love the roll-top that offers up dramatically more space when you need it. There's a side-access pocket to grab your camera without taking the backpack completely off, and the main rear compartment is where you grab all of your gear. It's stylish, exceptionally built, and has plenty of room (there are several sizes to choose from). Read our Best Camera Bags guide for more. —Julian Chokkattu As mentioned in our guide to the Best Packing Cubes, these are the best I've tested at this price point on Amazon. In addition to 20+ color and pattern options, they hit all the high points of what you want in a good set: decent compression, a convenient handle, mesh panels for ventilation, and a label window for keeping organized. In the six-piece set, you'll receive five rectangular-shaped cubes and a handy shoe bag. I wouldn't subject these basic polyester cubes to ballistics testing or throw them off a mountaintop, but for most travelers, they'll do perfectly fine in either a carry-on or checked suitcase. —Kat Merck The best hoodie you can buy on Amazon gets a steep price cut for Cyber Monday. Champion's iconic reverse-weave hoodie was the first hooded sweatshirt, and still holds its own in a world where every brand makes them. The fabric is sturdy but stretchy and ages gracefully over many wash cycles. —Martin Cizmar Jump to section: Computers, TV & Audio, Mobile Devices & Charging, Home & Kitchen, Beauty & Wellness, Travel Cyber Monday Retailers To Watch Amazon: For better or worse, Amazon has changed the game when it comes to shopping—if you want it, Amazon probably sells it. In the tradition of Amazon Prime Day, Amazon is rolling out major discounts for Cyber Monday and Cyber Monday on everything from bedding to home office gear to TVs to air fryers. This is a good time to save on the brand's own hardware, like Kindles and Blink security cameras, some of which are 50% off. Walmart: The Arkansas-based big box store has lots of tech deals like the gray colorway of Beats Solo4 for $79 ($50 off) plus the home and garden deals you'd expect like a Blackstone griddle for $157 ($67 off). REI: Outdoor co-op REI is a favorite among hikers, campers, and general outdoor enthusiasts. REI's cyber week sale starts November 29, with rotating deals on a myriad of WIRED-tested products, though you will find their deals live now, notably not called "Cyber Monday." Home Depot: Home improvement projects and general home upkeep can get costly quick. Home Depot has Cyber Monday discounts for virtually everything you need for the home, including Christmas trees and smart home appliances. Branch: We love Branch's home office furniture, including some WIRED-tested favorite office chairs. Everything is 20 percent off for Cyber Monday, so now's a great time to upgrade. Helix: We love Helix mattresses—if you're going to be spending a third of your life on something, it better be good. Upgrade your sleep for less with Helix's Cyber Monday sale, with 25 percent off sitewide. Target: Target has everything from groceries to flat screens to celebrity-endorsed beauty products. In addition to regular Cyber Monday sales, Target has price match guarantee and doorbuster clearance items. Best Buy: In addition to major discounts for Cyber Monday and Cyber Monday, Best Buy rolls out new doorbusters every Friday, slashing prices on everything from refrigerators to MacBooks. We've rounded up the best Best Buy deals we've seen so far, including the latest Apple MacBook Pro (M5) for $1,349 ($250 off) and Google Pixel 10 for $599 ($200 off). Dyson: Making everything from blow dryers to vacuums to air purifiers, we at WIRED are generally huge fans of this well-made, long-lasting (but often pricey) tech, made a lot more affordable with Cyber Monday sales. Lowe's: In addition to Cyber Monday sales, Lowe's has rotating daily deals on home improvement essentials, upgraded appliances, and outdoor tools like grills and lawnmowers. Atlas: At WIRED, we love caffeine, and subscription services. So we go bonkers for this coffee club subscription, and now you can get a free bag of beans for Cyber Monday. Sephora: Not only does Sephora have a dizzying amount of cosmetics, it also carries some of our favorite WIRED-tested hair straighteners, blow dry brushes, and LED devices.

Un sguardo sull'Africa: guarda il documentario di Telereggio. VIDEO

REGGIO EMILIA – Il titolo, “Le radici e le ali”, fa riferimento a un saggio proverbio africano. Ripercorre tappe del passato ma racconta soprattutto il presente il documentario realizzato dai nostri inviati che hanno seguito, tra il 15 e il 24 ottobre, il viaggio istituzionale del Comune di Reggio in Mozambico e in Sudafrica. Il reportage mostra le attività che proseguono nei due paesi, basate su collaborazioni di reciproco interesse, tutte coordinate dalla Fondazione E35 e che da dieci anni si occupa di progettazione internazionale. Nell’elenco degli ambiti coinvolti sono inclusi l’istruzione prescolare, la formazione universitaria e professionale, fino alla gestione dei rifiuti, passando dalla cultura e lo sport. Cinquanta minuti che gettano uno sguardo su luoghi incantevoli, su gente dalle diverse culture. Con interviste alle autorità locali, ai partecipanti alla missione ed anche testimonianze di esponenti storici dei movimenti che hanno liberato il Mozambico e il Sudafrica rispettivamente dal colonialismo e dall’apartheid. “Vuol dire tornare sulle orme di due figure, Giuseppe Soncini e Renzo Bonazzi, che hanno avviato un lavoro di semina corrispondente a questo legame di amicizia che esiste, che cominciò tra Reggio e Pemba, poi si è trasmesso anche al Sudafrica”, spiega il collega Andrea Bassi. Le riprese e la regia sono state curate da Gloria Menegatti: “E’ stata la responsabilità di dover raccontare l’ultima parte di questa storia che va avanti da cinquant’anni, una storia di collaborazioni tra popoli, la responsabilità di farlo con cura cercando di restituire la complessità, senza semplificare”.
